

Don't let
TRUMP
STEAL WORKERS'
TIPS!

Women in the restaurant industry have far too many #MeToo stories to share...

The restaurant industry is already the largest source of sexual harassment claims in the U.S., and now the Trump administration is considering a rule that would make sexual harassment even worse.

Secretary of Labor Alex Acosta, under pressure from the National Restaurant Association, is considering a policy that would let employers keep workers' tips. This constitutes robbery and will lead to tipped workers — who are mostly women — facing not only harassment from diners but also from employers who hold their tips.

Take action to protect women in the restaurant industry and their hard-earned tips:
